Al-Qaeda will once again become legal in Switzerland in 2015 because a further extension of the ban of the group is not possible under Swiss Law.

“[It is] debatable whether Switzerland possesses an adequate legal framework to mitigate this [jihadist] threat.” — Combating Terrorism Center (CTC) at West Point.

Another factor obstructing an official ban appears to be bureaucratic confusion. Swiss authorities are impeding progress by “blocking” each other. — Berner Zeitung

If the NDB’s estimates are correct, they would imply that—in terms of percentage—there are now more Swiss jihadists in Syria than French jihadists, even though France has the largest Muslim population in Europe.

“IS shows us that modern terror threats can only be combatted through prevention.” — Thomas Hurter, President of the National Security Commission.
